Mr. Morgan States That He Gave $20,000 to the Campaign Fund of 1908, Which Is $130,000 Less Than Contribution in 1904—The Financier Declares He Is Firm of J. P. Morgan & Company.

Washington, Oct. 3.—J. Pierpont Morgan told the senate committee investigating campaign contributions today that he contributed $150,000 in 1904 to the Republican fund This money was given in two payments. The first of $100,000 in October and the second of $50,000 in November.

The committee had already learned that $100,000 had been contributed by J P. Morgan & Company in 1904, but the statement as to the additional $50,000 came as a surprise. Mr. Morgan also stated that he contributed $20,000 to the Republican campaign fund in 1908.

Gives Small Amount.

In that year William H. Taft was the Republican candidate for president The amount given that year was $130,000 less than that of 1904

"I want it distinctly understood that J P Morgan & Company never contributed to any campaign fund under a promise of return of immunity We contributed only for the good of the country, and we never got any return for our $150,000," said Mr. Morgan during his cross-examination.

Charles H. Duell, assistant treasurer of the Republican national committee in 1904, followed Mr. Morgan on the stand. He testified that three insurance companies gave $50,000 each to the Roosevelt campaign fund in 1904.

NON-PARTISAN LAW IS UPHELD

Supreme Court Declares Judiciary Act Constitutional.

DECISION IS HANDED DOWN THIS MORNING

The Question Is Decided by a Three-to-One Vote.

Judges Donahue, Johnson and O'Hara, Democrats, Vote To Uphold the Law, While Shauck and Davis, Republicans, Oppose It. Judge Speer Does Not Sit, Owing to Direct Interest in Case.

Columbus, Oct. 3—By a vote of three to two, the non-partisan judiciary law was held constitutional by the Ohio supreme court this morning.

Judges Donahue, Johnson and O'Hara, Democrats, voted to uphold the law, while the two Republican members, Judges Schauck and Davis opposed it.

Judge Speer, Republican, being directly interested in the decision, because he is a candidate for re-election, did not sit. Had he been allowed to sit, the supreme court would undoubtedly have been deadlocked.

There were two cases before the court to test the constitutionality of the law, and the court decided both of them.

Lower Courts Upheld.

In the case of Morris J. Weinberger, of Cleveland, who sought to mandamus the Cuyahoga board of elections to print the names of judicial candidates under their respective party emblems, the supreme court affirmed the judgment of the lower courts which had refused to issue the writ of mandamus to Weinberger.

The other case, of Ervin D. Fritach, of Akron, a candidate for judge, for a similar writ of mandamus and the supreme court refused to issue it.

The decision today settled all questions as to the non-partisan judiciary law, and in the coming election the names of all judicial candidates, including justces of the peace, must appear on non-partisan ballot, without any partisan designations.

THE BALKAN WAR MAY BE AVERTED

Conference of Powers Involved Is Held in Paris.

BULGARIAN MINISTER SPEAKS HIS VIEWS

Austria Does Not Sanction the Anti-Loan Policy.

Balkan Governments Will Be as Well Satisfied as European Powers If Matters Are Settled Peacefully, Says M. Stancinoff—Moslem Priests Throughout Turkey Are Preaching Holy War Against Christendom.

Paris, Oct. 3—An important conference of the representatives of the powers on the Balkan situation was held at the foreign office today, presided over by M. Poincare, the French foreign minister. It was attended by the diplomatic envoys of England, Germany, Austria, Russia, Bulgaria, Greece, Servia and Montenegro.

The conference is reported to have dwelt principally with the financial phase of the situation, by which the powers, with the possible exception of Austria, will act independently in refusing war loans

Afterward, M. Stancinoff, Bulgarian minister to France, declared that his government has been and still is working for peace.

"My home government is fully in accord with the European powers which are seeking to prevent a Balkan war," said Mr. Stancinoff.

"We must be on the defensive, however, in view of the military activities of Turkey. It is true that the Bulgarian army is being mobilized, but this is a precautionary measure. It is not to be interpreted as an aggressive act toward Turkey or any other power.

Not a Territorial War.

"The powers of the continental nations have tacitly agreed that, if war should come, it must not be a conflict for territorial acquisition. This, of course, is to prevent the embroilment of any European power.

"The Bulgarian government, as well as the governments of other of the near Eastern powers, have insisted that Turkey carry out the terms of the Berlin convention for Balkan reforms.

"Turkey has hesitated to the point where her action might be interpreted as flat refusal. These reforms are recognized as just, and unless they are brought about, there will always be unrest in Balkan territory.

"I believe that the mighty chancelleries of Europe realize that affairs must be brought to a head, but if Turkey can be influenced by peaceful measures, instead of by war, I am sure that the satisfaction felt by the Balkan governments will be as great as that felt by the governments of Europe.

Preach Holy War.

Constantinople, Oct. 3—Throughout Turkey priests of the Moslem faith are preaching a holy war against all Christendom. Fanatics are demanding of the government that war be declared, not only against the Balkan states, but against all Europe.

The Sheik ul Islam, ehad of the Mohammedan priesthood, is in daily consultation with the Turkish ministry.

The Turks are distributing inflammatory circulars throughout European Turkey, urging all Turks who are old enough to bear arms, to rise up against the Christians

Practically all the Christians throughout the Balkans are members of the Greek Catholic church. Because of the danger from fanaticism this is the most dangerous element yet injected into the situation.

There are fears of wholesale massacres of Christians in regions where the Turks are in control.

Further War Reports.

London, Oct. 3.—Further reports of hostilities in the Balkans reached London, but came without confirmation.

One of these reports stated that sixty armed Servians had crossed the frontier into European Turkey, but were chased back to their own soil by a Turkish battalion after a sharp fight. The Turks pursued the Servians to the border and then retreated

News from Constantinople that the Mohammedan priests were calling for a holy war caused great uneasiness among the continental diplomats.

One ray of hope, however, that was cast upon the darkening clouds was that Russia will join other important European powers in refusing to make a war loan to any of the Balkan kingdoms. This would leave Austria standing alone, and the weight of pressure in favor of peace, and probably would drive Austria into the ranks of the countries who are determined to avert war through the medium of financial channels

All Depends Upon Turkey.

All now depends upon Turkey's answer to the joint ultimatum of the Balkan states demanding autonomy for Macedonia, Albania, old Servia and Crete, and other reforms in European Turkey.

Even should Turkey reply in the negative or refuse to reply at all to this or a supplemental ultimatum to follow later, no formal declaration of war is expected before the end of next week.

Paris was the center of attention today with Sergius Sazonoff, the Russian foreign minister, in that city. Centralized negotiations of the powers were focused here.

M. Sazonoff had appointments with the envoys of all the involved powers today and it was expected that official announcement would be made of an accord entered into between the English and Russian foreign offices in relation to the situation in southeastern Europe.

There were further sharp declines on the bourses today in consequence of impending eventualities. Government securities and industrial and railroad shares were alike depressed.

Leaving Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Many Servians and Bulgarians have left Chicago for their former homes to engage in the struggle which they believe is to follow in the Balkans.

Of the 25,000 Greeks and Bulgarians in Chicago, a large percentage have seen service in the armies of their countries, and are still under the control of the government they left.

$50,000 SENT BACK TO FANS

Applications for World's Series Tickets Flood Offices,

ALTHOUGH THERE IS NO ADVANCE SALE

Checks Are Mailed Back With a Note of Explanation.

Reserved Seats Will Be Placed on Sale on Date To Be Announced Through the Newspapers, Says Secretary Heydler—Sale Said To Be Scheduled for Next Monday To Thwart Ticket Speculators.

New York, Oct. 3.—Fifty thousand dollars in checks, received at the offices of the New York Giants and the National league for tickets to the world's baseball series has been returned to the senders, it was learned today.

There was no mail sale of tickets scheduled for this year's series, but this fact did not prevent a flood of letter applications. These have been received by the thousands in both places, the only thing to do being to mail back the checks with a note, reiterating the conditions under which tickets for the series will be sold.

Checks Are Returned.

The most common method was to return the checks with a note, saying that the disposal of tickets was in the hands of the national commission.

At the offices of the national commission, Secretary Heydler, of the National league, was entirely buried by the flood of applications The only thing he could do was to announce that only reserved seats would be placed on sale on a date to be announced through the newspapers.

It is said this sale will take place at the Polo grounds next Monday to afford ticket speculators as little time as possible to dispose of tickets before the series begins.

ONE OF NATURE'S CHOICEST GEMS

Dedicated Today to City of Colorado Springs.

THE GARDEN OF THE GODS, IN COLORADO,

Will Henceforth Be a Great Municipal Park.

Gift Comes Through Will of Late Charles E. Perkins—Marvelous Tract of Land Embraces Some of the Most Curious and Wonderful Geological Formations in World. Ceremonies Marked by Simplicity.

Colorado Springs, Colo. Oct.3—With simple ceremonies, the Garden of the Gods was formally dedicated today to the city of Colorado Springs. In the presence of the widow and members of the family of the late Charles E. Perkins by whom this park was given to the city, the simple ceremonies were held at the entrance to the park.

A large bronze tablet, in memory and in honor of Mr. Perkins had been placed on the north gateway rock, and it was today unveiled Former Mayor Henry C. Hall of Colorado Springs, who had been named as one of the trustees to whom the Garden of the Gods had been transferred, pending its acceptance by the city, made an address on behalf of the Perkins family, as did also Mr. Robert Perkins of Farmingham, Massachusetts, son of the late railroad builder.

Judge Horace G. Lunt, chairman of the Colorado Springs park commission, responded on behalf of the city, formally accepting the Garden of the Gods and expressing the appreciation of the people of the city for the gift.

The city of Colorado Springs has been in possession of the Garden of the Gods, through the gift of the Perkins heirs, since Christmas day, 1909, but the formal dedication was not held until today.

Today's exercises at the Garden of the Gods were preceded yesterday by a reception to Mrs. Perkins at the Antlers hotel, given by the city planning committee.

In 1879, Mr. Perkins secured title to the 480 acres of land a few miles northwest of Colorado Springs, known as the Garden of the Gods. Throughout his life-time, he maintained this great natural park free of access to the entire world, and although he was several times approached by promoters, offering large sums of money for the land, he refused to part with it. When he died, in 1907, the Garden of the Gods passed, with the remainder of the estate, to his children, and the only indication as to its disposal was this note found, in his own handwriting, on the back of an old envelope:

"It is my wish that my children give the Garden of the Gods to the city of Colorado Springs for park purpose"

To carry out these wishes, the six children shortly afterwards began the necessary legal proceedings, and on Christmas day, 1909, the world-famed scenic wonder formally passed into the possession of the city of Colorado Springs.

The children of Mr. Perkins, who with their mother, Mrs. Edith F. Perkins of Burlington, Iowa, made the gift are Robert F. Perkins, Farmingham, Massachusetts; Alice Perkins Hooper, Boston, Masssachusetts; Edith Perkins Cunningham and Margaret Perkins Rice both of Westwood, Massachusetts, and Mary Russell Perkins and Charles E. Perkins, both of Burlington, Iowa.

By the conditions, under which the city of Colorado Springs accepted the gift, the tract shall continuously and forever be designated as "The Garden of the Gods" and shall be maintained and used as a public park, free to all; no intoxicating liquors shall ever be manufactured, sold or otherwise dispensed upon the premises; and no buildings, other than those necessary for the care of the property, shall be erected. The tract comprises 180 acres and, according to the valuation of the Colorado Springs park commission, is worth $200,000.

The marvelous and fantastic rock formations of the Garden of the Gods have long been objects of admiration and study by travelers, tourists and geologists the world over. Once the worshiping place of the Indian, who saw in the uplifted rocks the forms and temples of his diety, the Garden of the Gods is today a point of pilgrimage for the white man of all creeds and nationalities.

Here, tumbled riotously into the large natural garden at the foot of Pike's peak are rocks of grotesque and wonderful shape, taking the form of almost every conceivable animate and inanimate object.

through Senator La Follette's series of five articles on Roosevelt and his candidacy, which will provide a weekly thrill in the campaign beginning Friday, when the first will be printed in La Follette's magazine.

Without using a harsh word to match the colonel's invective against the Taft leaders in the Chicago convention, Senator La Follette has written the most remarkable political document of his career. Its style is so deliberate and its facts so convincing that the intelligent reader wonders why the author does not break away from his restraint and say in so many words that Roosevelt is engaged in a conspiracy to commit grand larceny, with the presidency as the coveted loot, or in a conspiracy to either get it in the White House under false pretense.

Why La Follette Refused.

One of the most important parts of the work is devoted to the reasons which Roosevelt made to get La Follette to withdraw in his favor from the race for the Republican nomination. The negotiations were carried on through a group of senators and others friendly to La Follette, to whom Roosevelt intrusted the message that if he were nominated La Follette could write the platform, and that not a single comma of the original platform would be changed.

La Follette's reasons for his refusal to go into the deal promise to match in current interest Henry Clay's "I'd rather be right than be president."

Briefly, they were that Roosevelt was a fake Progressive and that he could violate a pledge made in a high form as easily as he violated his pledge against a third term

WILL MAKE HIS 199th VISIT TO MARION

MONDAY, Oct. 7th,

HOTEL COMFORT,

10 A. M. to 8 P. M. One Day Only

PRACTICE LIMITED

To the Treatment of Chronic Diseases by Home Methods.

L. F. VOKE, PH. G., M. D.

Graduate, Ohio State University, Starling Medical College, American College of Optometry. Eight years of College and University training. Nearly twenty years experience in the treatment of CHRONIC DISEASES of MEN AND WOMEN.

Symptoms Most Common

to chronic sufferers are weakness, nervousness, despondency, sleeplessness, discouragement, lack of ambition, failing memory, confusion of ideas, poor circulation, headache, dizziness, brain and nerve exhaustion, palpitation and fluttering of the heart, weak and trembling limbs, worry, fear, pains in head, back, kidneys or joints, cough, variable appetite, chills and flashes of heat, shortness of breath, swelling of hands and feet, dry or clammy skin, coated tongue, bad taste in mouth, gas in stomach and bowels, weak spells, soft and flabby muscles, impaired vision, pimples, bloating and many other symptoms incident to diseases peculiar to men and women. The vast majority of men and women are deficient in some respect. Many are not exactly sick, but some chronic affection is sapping their vital force. They attend to daily duties but life has become a drag and lost much of its pleasure.

Every Afflicted Man and Woman should heed these symptoms. They are nature's warning that something is wrong—a cry for help. Temporary relief is not sufficient. The cause must be discovered and removed.

Remember, that nearly every chronic disease, if taken in time, can be cured by proper home treatment. Neglect only leads to more serious results. Do not put off a matter of such vital importance. Success or failure to life depends on your physical and mental condition. No matter what the disease, its name or nature, if it is chronic and susceptible to home treatment, you are invited to call or write regarding it. Everything confidential. Consultation, examination and advice free.

DISEASES OF WOMEN

Ninety per cent of women suffer from some form of female weakness. Many, in secret, live in the most miserable, unhappy lives. Do not let modesty destroy your health. Simple home treatment, of the proper kind, if used in time will prevent serious complications that may lead to the necessity of dangerous operations and expensive hospital treatment. Dr. Voke's "Treatment at home plan" is not a "cure-all" remedy. Each case is treated separately with remedies adapted to each individual. No humiliating examinations. No operations. Remedies are harmless and can be used in privacy. More than one-half of Dr. Voke's patients are women. Write if you cannot call. Consultation free and confidential.

DISEASES OF MEN

More rot is printed and more fraud is practiced on this class of diseases than all others. These unfortunates surely are entitled to a square deal. Dr. Voke wants every man who is weak, nervous, broken down, discouraged or suffering from any disease caused by ignorance, excesses, contagion, incompetent treatment or neglect to read his book on sex hygiene entitled "A Physician's Advice to His Son." Contains information that every parent and young man should know, also directions for home treatment that will cure many afflicted men without doctors, drugs or expense. This book does not advertise any doctor, medical firm, or patent medicine. Mailed to plain sealed package on receipt of 10 cents, stamps or coin.

EYES TESTED FREE

Many chronic troubles are attended by defective vision or eye strain. Glasses fitted and furnished.

Why Consult Dr. Voke?

He has made regular monthly visits to this community for fifteen years and has established a permanent practice and reputation. His practice is limited to chronic diseases and he has spent practically all his life in the study and treatment of them. He is in the prime of life (forty-five) and at his very best to do good work. His practice consists mainly of long standing cases who have failed to obtain satisfaction elsewhere. At least three-fourths of his patients are sent to him by former patrons. If he thinks he cannot help you he will say so. His treatment is easy to use and requires no detention from occupation, family or home. He does not depend on "cure-all" remedies. Each case is treated separately with remedies adapted to each individual. Injurious drugs or dragging is avoided. His internal remedies are mild and harmless. Special direct ons are given each case regarding diet, bathing, habits, etc. When necessary, special directions for massage are given and other local treatments are devised and furnished to meet the needs of each case.

REMEMBER

That Dr. Voke invites searching investigation of his work and methods, that his best reference are his many friends and patients, the result of fifteen years practice in this community. That his charges are so fair and reasonable that the poorest working man or woman need not hesitate to apply for treatment. Most important of all, do not put off treatment until complication or complete collapse comes. Oftentimes a few days of sick-a-bed illness costs more than a complete course of treatment.

Investigation proves it true. Below is a statement of a Marion resident. No stronger proof of merit can be had.

Mrs. J. H. Vaughn, 419 north State street, Marion, Ohio, says: "I have been a sufferer from kidney complaint for a long time and I have tried several remedies without good results. About two months ago I first used Doan's Kidney Pills and found that they did me a lot of good. I intend to continue taking them until I get more relief as I know that they are a good kidny medicine. VALUATION OF SHARES OF STOCK IN BANKS

Certified Back to County Auditor Jay Spaulding.

WHAT THE BANKS MUST DO IN FUTURE

State Tax Commission States That the Bad Loans in Assets of All Banks Must Be Eliminated from Bank Books or Will Be Taxed at Their Face Value.

The valuation of shares of stock in banks of Marion county, has been certified back to County Auditor Jay Spaulding, to whom the returns were originally made, by the state tax commission.

The value of the shares of the stocks in Marion county's banks is fixed by the commission at $1,398,200. This is an increase over last year of $31,690.

Reductions in the value of bank shares of only $210 were made as follows.

Farmer's bank at Waldo, $80; the Marion Savings bank, $70, and the Marion county Bank, $60.

Before the returns are made next year the state commission will send the banks, through the county auditor, circular letters, in which they will be told that they are expected to pay taxes on what they say to their patrons they are worth while in the business of getting deposits. These letters will be distributed "to every bank in Ohio.

The commission declares that the bad loans in assets of all banks must be charged off, or be taxed for their face value. Marion county banks have never made a practice of charging off to profit and loss their bad loans, with a view to decreasing their surplus and undivided profits.

The practice of carrying bad loans as surplus and undivided profits, to increase the bank's book worth, has not been followed by the majority of the banks of the county.

The state commission made very little change in the returns as made to it by County Auditor Spaulding, who returned total bank stock shares of $1,397,030. The commission increased his return to $1,398,200, boosting the auditor's total valuation only $1,170.

The sum of $500 was added to the shares of the Campbell National bank at La Rue, $200 to the La Rue bank at La Rue, and $680 to the Caledonia Deposit bank at Coledonia, making a total addition of $1,380.

NEW AUTOMOBILE DELIVERY TRUCK

R. T. Lewis & Company Make a Change in Delivery.

A new automobile delivery truck for R. T. Lewis & Company's grocery reached the city, Wednesday afternoon, being driven through from the factory at New Bremen. As a result of the increasing business of the store, the delivery system was unable to take care of the business to the satisfaction of the customers and Mr. Lewis.

The new truck is a 1913 model, Auglaize make, and has a capacity of 1,200 pounds. It is modern in every way and is built for speed and rough service. It is equipped with a ten-mile-an-hour regulator, and by its use Mr. Lewis expects to give his patrons the best kind of delivery service. The truck was on exhibition at the fair.

ELECTORS MAY VOTE ON THE PROPOSITION

Matter of an Experimental Station in This County.

SOME WORK SEEN AT MARION COUNTY FAIR

If Marion County Taxpayers Will Buy a Site of from Eighty to 160 Acres the State Will Do Its Share in Establishing a Station—Farmers Favor Project.

Marion county electors may be called upon to vote for or against the establishment of one of the state's experimental agricultural stations in this county at the general election, November 5. The county commissioners are in favor of the proposition and Joseph D. Guthery, a member of the state board of control of the experimental stations, is now investigating with a view to submitting it to a vote of the people.

"Since the people have seen some of the great work of the experimental station at the fair this week," said Guthery Friday, "many have asked me if Marion county could not get an experimental station here. I believe that we can. It would certainly be a great thing for the county.

"If the electors are willing to vote to buy a site of eighty or 160 acres, the state will do its share. The state, of course, would have supervision over it, as it has in the six experimental stations now in Ohio."

In order to submit the question to the people, Mr. Guthery stated that it would first be necessary to obtain petitions containing the names of five per cent. of the voters.

"I don't know whether we can get these names before the election, but I am going to try it and have the people vote on it. The farmers will all be in favor of it and the town people who have seen some of the results of the experimental station's work at the fair this week will also be in favor of it."

PRETTIEST THING In My Home is a Macey Book Cabinet

To set one of the new Macey Book Cabinets in your home is to set before your children an example of such good taste that throughout all the days of their lives they will feel its refining influence.

Macey Book Cabinets are the first sectional bookcases ever built after the designs of the old masters. These old masters, Sheraton, Chippendale, Robert Adam and Fra Junipero, were as great in Furniture as Shakespeare in Literature, as Mozart in Music, as Michael Angelo in Painting.

The new Macey Book Cabinets are the only sectional bookcases that can be added to, both upward and sideways, and still not look like sectional bookcases, but like heirlooms of furniture. Can be taken from or rearranged without destroying their beauty and style.

So artful is the cabinet work that dealers frequently have to take them apart to convince customers that they are sectional.

Macey old master designs harmonize with any furniture you now have, and are made in such variety of popular prices, sizes, woods and finishes, that they fit any requirement of space or purse.

Macey Sectional Book Cabinets are built under the direction of Mr. O. H. L. Wernicke, the father of sectional bookcases and President of The Macey Company. Mr. Wernicke's name is still used in the corporate title of a competing firm, with which he has long since had no connection.

If you wish to give your home and your children the most inspiring influence you ever gave them, you will come into our store and see these new Macey Book Cabinets.

FRED J. HAYNES LOSES RIGHT LEG THURSDAY

Falls in Trying To Board a Moving Freight Train.

REFUSES TO HAVE THE LEG AMPUTATED

A Long Wait Until Mother Arrives Is Necessary — Member Amputated Just Below the Knee—Haynes Is Twenty-Seven Years of Age and Resides in Galion.

Fred J Haynes, of Galion, fell as he attempted to board a Big Four freight train with a suitcase between Kenton avenue and the depot, Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, and suffered the loss of his right leg. He was removed in the Hess & Marbert ambulance to the Marion hospital, where he refused to give his consent to amputation of the mangled member without first seeing his mother

Mrs Charlotte Haynes, who recently moved to Marion from Galion and resides on Pearl street, was not found until after a long search and in consequence the operation was not performed until more than three hours later. The leg was amputated just below the knee.

Friday morning, at the hospital, it was said that the condition of the young man was as good as could be expected He will recover unless unforseen complications develop. The amputation was performed by Drs. Reu and H. J. Lower.

The injured man is twenty-seven years old and unmarried. He has been making his home at No. 372 Prairie street, Galion, and was at one time employed by the Erie.

Haynes Becomes Abusive.

Frank J. Haynes' anger because surgeons at the Marion City hospital amputated his right leg without his consent, he says, after he had been injured by a Big Four train, resulted in the Galion man being sent to the poorhouse. Saturday. Haynes is declared by hospital surgeons and nurses to have made such a disturbance that it was found impossible to keep him in the institution.

Haynes was injured, Thursday afternoon about 4 30 o'clock. Although his leg was crushed almost to a pulp, he refused to give his consent to amputation until his mother, Mrs. Charlotte S. Haynes, was found. He said he did not know where she lived, but she was finally located at No. 372 Pearl street, having only recently moved to this city from Galion. Three hours elapsed before the amputation was made.

Mrs Haynes, when told that amputation was absolutely necessary, told her son that was the only thing to do According to the hospital surgeons, Haynes then gave his consent, though reluctantly. Later, when he came out from the influences of the anaesthetic and discovered that the operation had been performed he became very indignant. The nurses say he even became profane and abusive. so violent he became, in fact, that he annoyed other patients and it was decided to remove him to to infirmary. Haynes expressed no regrets at being removed there, but quieted down consideraby when informed what disposition was to be made of him

THE DISCOVERY OF A TAILESS WANDERER

Gale's Comet Is Visible in the Early Evening.

Gale's comet can be seen every evening between sunset and 8 o'clock in the southwestern part of the heavens, according to R. E. Fosdick, director of the Dayton Astronomical observatory The comet is visible to the naked eye Just now the heavenly visitor is slightly south of being in line with the sun. On October 4 it was in direct line with the sun, and then proceeded on northward.

According to Mr. Fosdick, the comet is distinctly visible if a field glass is used Up to the present it has not developed a tail, but scientists believe that the appendage may be developed any time, as the body approaches the earth.

The comet was discovered only recently, last, by Astronomer Hassell Sydney, Australia.

CLAIMS HE IS HIS OWN GRANDFATHER

Record of Richard Connell of Warren County.

Claiming to be his own grandfather and a brother to his own son, Richard Connell, a Warren county man has a record which is most extraordinary to say the least.

"I will tell you how it is," said Connell, in explaining his strange relationships. "You see I met a young widow in Iowa by the name of Sarah Minor and we were married. She had a stepdaughter. Then my father met our step daughter and married her. That made my wife the mother-in-law of her father-in-law, and made my stepdaughter my stepmother and my father became my stepson.

"Then my stepmother, the stepdaughter of my wife, had a son. That boy was, of course, because he was my father's son, my brother, but he was also the son of my wife's stepdaughter and therefore her grandson. That made me grandfather of my stepbrother.

"Then my wife had a son. My mother-in-law, the stepsister of my son, is also his grandmother, because he is her stepson's child My father is the brother-in-law of my child, because his stepsister is my wife. I am the brother of my own son, who is also the child of my grandmother, I am my mother's borther-in-law, my son is my father's nephew and I'm my own grandfather. So there you are.

REMINDERS OF AN ELECTION DURING WAR

Spectacular Struggle of Political Parties in 1864.

MARION MEN ARE ON HISTORICAL BALLOTS

Very Few of the Tickets Are Preserved, but Those Saved Are Being Reproduced—Relics of a Critical Period in the History of the Country—Order for Recruiting.

The most spectacular balloting that the country has ever seen, when the civil war soldiers voted in the field, and Judge Ozias Bowen, of Marion, was a candidate for elector-at-large on the Ohio Union presidential ticket, and James H. Godman, of Marion, was a candidate for state auditor on the Union State ticket for Ohio, is strikingly told by E. W. Lightner in a special letter to last Sunday's Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Reproductions of the two Ohio tickets are published along with an old recruiting order. Relics of the election in the form of printed ballots, voted by the soldiers in the field, are so rare, that they are said never to have been reproduced before in the mass of reminiscences which have been made public since the war.

Few Ballots Preserved.

The reason that they have never been made public is that they were not preserved. However, one man did preserve some of them, and he is Captain Joshua B. Davis, of Sandusky, first lieutenant of the 101st Ohio Volunteer infantry, and before the close of the war transferred to the engineer corps and detailed as one of the recruiting officers. Ballots of 1864 for national electors, for state and local tickets, the designation of the national ticket, with the names of Lincoln and Johnson forming the "Ohio Union Presidential Ticket," and for the state ticket, the "Union State Ticket for Ohio," all were preserved by Captain Davis.

The candidate opposing John Brough, of Cleveland, fo rgovernor on the "Union State Ticket for Ohio" was no less a notorious a person than Clement C. Vallandigham, a sympathizer with the South, and denounced as the "Copperhead" candidate, who was defeated and who was later sent across the Union lines by order of President Lincoln to be with his chosen friends

Order To Recruit.

Of perculiar interest, too, is the Dispatch's reproduction of an order issued by Major General Thomas for the recruiting of members for the engineer corps.

Pages that would make up volumes and volumes are being published as reminiscences of the great war, but those pages are composed chiefly of material that has been published before. Little has ever been published with regard to the election crisis of 1864, when the extreme wing of the Democratic party declared that the war on the part of the North had been a failure and that another Lincoln should be chosen to bring the fratricidal contest to an end.

The publishing of reproductions of the Ohio tickets in those days by the Dispatch for that reason is deeply interesting to those who remember the trying times of that period, and doubly interesting to Marionites because the names of two distinguished Marion men, now deceased, are carried upon them as candidates.

THE FALL STOCKING OF THE OHIO STREAMS

Many Fish To Be Supplied by State Commission.

"Fishes to the right of them, fishes to the left of them," is the cry at the office of the fish and game commission in the New Hayden building in Columbus.

Preparation for the fall stocking season are beng made, and at the first twinge of cold weather, multitudes of tiny minnows will be shipped to all parts of the state. An estimate of the total is impossible, it is said, but it is expected to reach far into the hundreds of thousands.

Fish of all kinds are supplied by the commission, but the most common and those which thrive most easily are bass, cat and carpple. A few perch are also placed in reservoirs.

OLD GAS PROPERTY SOLD AND NEW SITE BOUGHT

Company Buys the Triangle of Ohio Tractor Co.

LOOKING TO FUTURE GAS DEVELOPMENTS

The Site of the Abandoned Gas Plant Is Sold to W. T. Jones, Who Will Erect Dwelling Houses on Prospect, Columbia and Pearl Street Fronts—Notable Improvement.

Two important real estate deals were informally closed Saturday Through one transaction the Marion Gas company acquires the one-acre triangle starting at the northeast corner of Center and Leader street and abutting Leader street and the Big Four railway right-of-way. The Gas company has claimed the option given it by the Ohio Tractor company, and papers will pass in a few days. The consideration is in the neighborhood of $10,000. Manager Mickley says the purchase has been inspired by no particular purpose, except that the company has sold its property on south Prospect street, and desired a tract centrally located, and the old Leader triangle fits exactly the requirements. It is known however, that the Gas company is thinking of their future time when the natural gas supply may be exhausted. When that day comes the Leader street site close to the railroads and at the lowest level in the city, will be ideal for a gas plant.

The other deal is the sale of the old gas property, owned by the Marion Gas company, on Prospect, Columbia and Pearl streets, to William T. Jones. The property has a frontage of 120 feet on Prospect street, and 180 feet frontage on Pearl, in addition to the frontage on the entire block length on Columbia The old gas plant buildings and gas holder are to be razed or removed, and Mr. Jones will build up the entire tract with modern dwelling-houses The consideration has not been announced.

The purchase and improvements will make a most acceptable change in that section of the city, for an old eye sore, however well it was kept, wil be transformed into a collection of beautiful and attractive homes.

The razing of the old building will remove a landmark, familiar to Marionites for nearly fifty years. The first artificial gas used in Marion was made at that plant

A FLANDERS AUTO GOES INTO DITCH

An Accident About Four Miles North of City.

When returning to their homes from the Marion fair in a Flanders automobile, Thursday evening about 8 o'clock, Berthold Limbrecht, Theodore Bolish and Arthur Gamel, of Upper Sandusky, narrowly escaped serious injury or death as a result of their machine overturning into a ditch along the roadside, four miles north of Marion. All miraculously escaped injury, although Limbrecht and Gamel were pinned beneath the car. The machine was wrecked.

Gamel owned the machine and was driving rapidly. He collided with a telephone pole in attempting to pass another vehicle.

Frederick Stucky, of Upper Sandusky, was driving another car a short distance behind Gamel and his companions. He brought the three men to Marion and they later returned to their homes over the Hocking Valley railroad. Stucky was accompanied in his machine by Foster Shumaker, Edward Katzenmeyer and Marion Houser, of Upper Sandusky.

THE VOTER SHOULD NOT BE DECEIVED.

We congratulate Secretary of State Graves upon the clear reasoning and sound sense of justice upon which he based his decision that the name of one person could not appear upon more than one party ticket upon the election ballot. It is said that an appeal from this decision will be taken to the courts. To this we presume nobody will greatly object, for the question involved should be finally decided.

But if it should be found that Secretary Graves' decision is not in accord with the law, the law should be made to accord with it, for it is in thorough accord with honestly, justice and fairness.

No one will honestly contend that the position taken by Mr. Graves works injury to the legal rights of any man or impairs the voting franchise of any elector. The elector is not debarred from voting for any man, whose name appears upon any ticket of the ballot and for whom he desires to vote. But the purpose of putting the name of one person upon more than one ballot is to deceive the voter into casting his ballot for some one he may not desire to favor.

The law recognizes the organization or political parties and their right to nominate tickets to be voted on. It provides that these parties shall make declaration of their principles and purposes, and it requires that candidates for party nominations shall subscribe their adherence to the principles of that party. It requires that voters at party primaries shall, upon demand, affirm their allegiance to the party, its candidates and its principles. No man can belong to two parties holding conflicting views and purposes. Who can dispute this conclusion? To place the name of the nominee of one party also upon the ticket of another tends to deceive the voter, who is guided in his selection of candidates to be voted for by the name of the party with which he is affiliated and by the device or emblem chosen by that party to surmount its ticket.

Let us illustrate. In Columbus, the Progressive party, whose platform declares for a maintenance of the protective tariff system, endorsed as its nominee for congress Mr. Clement L. Brumbaugh, who had already been nominated for the same office by the Democrats upon a platform declaring for a tariff for revenue only. Mr. Brumbaugh has subscribed to the Democratic platform, and is known to be in hearty accord with its declarations. And yet his name placed upon the Progressive ticket would, or might, secure the vote of men who are Progressives and earnest in support of the protective tariff policy enunciated by their own party declaration.

If Mr. Brumbaugh's name is, under the secretary's ruling, removed from the Progressive ticket, where it does not belong, he not being a Progressive by belief or affiliation, the Progressive, who desires to do so, can still easily vote for him by marking a cross before his name, where it properly appears, on the Democratic ticket.

The law still further protects the rights of the candidates and the electors. It provides that those who do not wish to become party candidates may have their names put upon the ballot by petition as independent candidates.

You may not know, you can not know, the personal views of all the candidates for office. But if the name appears under a party designation upon the ballot, you have, or should have, the right to assume that his views upon vital issues and policies are those expressed in the platform of that party, and thus you will be able to vote for or against him as your views agree or disagree with that party declaration

In times past, some minor parties in Ohio have had their campaigns financed by candidates of other parties, who have paid for endorsements in order to secure the unfair advantage of having their names appear more than once upon the ballot, thus deceiving the unwary voter.

This is not a partisan question and should not be so considered The position the Star takes now is the position it has always occupied on this question, as the files will show. We believe that the ballot should be made so clear in its meaning that no voter can be deceived or misled when he casts his ballot. He has the right to make his unrestricted choice of party and candidates as he has the right to decide his own attitude upon every public question. He has the right to know that the party designations are not false or misleading and that the men who have sought places upon them, respectively stand for the things the party publicly advocates. He should not be deceived by a masquerade, or led unaware into voting for a political hermaphrodite

Of course, the man, who doesn't want to work and dreads going around the corner for fear of running into one of the many jobs out hunting a man, is in favor of a change of administration.

Governor Ben Hooper, of Tennessee, is not the sort of man who can be scared by billingsgate. He was a newsboy, and he learned to judge bubatic orator or the oratorical acrobat? He has the Colonel's number, all right, and he also has the backing of his people in any quarrel in which he may see fit to engage.

Some men in public office appear to labor under the delusion that economy in the handling of public funds means the expenditure of a few dollars less than their predecessors in office, no matter how extravagant their predecessors may have been.

There is one satisfaction in watching the upward tendency of the price of coal, a lot of us use gas.

When we hear that Bourke Cochran has cancelled his Columbus meeting, we wonder if George Perkins is getting cold pedals and the flow of campaign coin running low in the B M camp For Bourke was ever a follower of the camp which boasted the best commissary and afforded the best picking.

No doubt there are people who are sore at the administration because it has not prevented them from investing their surplus wealth, made under it, in wildcat gold mining stocks.

THE BOOMERANGS.

THE GOOD OLD TIMES.

The extension of the rural mail delivery system under present plans of the postal department will wipe out thousands of village postoffices. Of course, we recognize the benefits which will come of the prompt, frequent and sure delivery of mails to the homes of all the people But it will not be an unmixed blessing. The village postoffices have been civic centers, forums where mighty questions were solved, social clubs and communal exchanges. We are getting too much away from the habit or necessity for gatherings of the people to discuss their affairs, important or trivial, held through intention or design. This is one of the reasons why we deplore the passing of political conventions. We are breeding selfishness, exclusiveness and the unsocial qualities.

We remember a few years ago in the southern part of the state to have heard a farmer remark: "Well, with the telephone, free rural mail delivery, natural gas on my own land, if I can rig up a circus in the barn and buy a phonograph, I won't have to come to town at all except to pay my taxes, for I sell my milk, butter, poultry and garden truck at my front gate, my steers at the barn scales and feed my crops, but I am getting durned lonesome."

We sometimes feel that we are having to pay a big price for the pace we travel We are progressive—just as progressive as any of these fellows honing for office or bewailing the loss of one—but we occasionally feel that we could get along with one less speed forward We like to recall the pleasant gatherings of friends in our earlier days, when no one was out of breath or too hurried to be kind and human, and sympathetic, the days when, as Whitcomb Riley puts it, "we were all so happy and so poor."

There is much agitation for the eight-hour day or the six-hour day of labor for those who work with their hands. We would be inclined to favor all these things if they were to be of general application—to reach the "rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief, lawyer, doctor, merchant, Indian chief," and that the time we lop off our working day could be devoted to loafing and chumming around with our neighbors and friends and finding out how many of their mental gears meshed with ours. Why that would breed an understanding and concord of purpose that would advance the millennium on seven-league boots.

Of course the little postoffice has to go But can not we have, as the drug store man says, "something equally as good"" We are a wonderful people, doing wonderful things, but we don't have as much fun—fun of the kind you like to dig up out of the back of your memory and think about—as people used to have when they didn't have nearly so much over which to be happy

MOST VALUABLE COMPARISONS

[St Louis Globe-Democrat]

The Republican state committee of Kentucky has issued a carefully prepared address to voters that deserves to be read throughout the country. It gets down to practical facts of importance to every citizen A statement of what happened in the last Democratic administration is to the point in considering what may happen in another. A few months after his second term began, in August, 1893, President Cleveland sent to a special session of congress a message in which he said: "With plenteous crops, with abundant promise of remunerative production and manufacture, with unusual invitation to safe investment, and with satisfactory assurance to business enterprise, suddenly financial distrust and fear have sprung up on every side" That was the preface to several calamitous years Before the Democratic administration was a year old millions of industrial workers were idle, and the wheels stopped turning in an immense number of once prosperous establishments At the end of 1893 the labor union officials stated the number unable to obtain work at 3,000,000

Under the last Democratic president the value of the live stock in the country fell off $385,000,000 Seventy-four railroads went into the hands of receivers in a single year The interest-bearing debt of the government increased $262,000,000 in a time of peace. "If the farmers, laboring men and business men," says the vigorous Kentucky address, 'allow themselves to be hoodwinked into electing another Democratic president and congress they will, like the calf that followed the steer, learn the difference at milking time." Compare the figures of the present with those of the direful Democratic period of 1893-97, and then draw the lesson that will, if common prudence is heeded, govern the election near at hand. "Mr Taft is not a politician," the Kentucky document says in conclusion, "but he is safe and no man feels uneasy while he is at the helm."

THE RECALL OF PRESIDENTS.

[Cincinnati Times-Star.]

"I will go even further than the Progressive platform," shouted Roosevelt at Winslow, Arizona, the other day. "I would like to have the recall apply to everybody, including the presidents"

Mr. Roosevelt claims to be a great reader of history. He says he has specialized on Lincoln.

How any patriotic American who has even a fair knowledge of the history of his country during Lincoln's first administration can honestly advocate the recall of presidents is beyond our comprehension. Never during the twelve months of 1863 or the first seven or eight months of 1864 was there a time when Lincoln would not have been overwhelmingly beaten in a recall election. The war had not gone well. In many cases the union armies had been outgeneraled. Charges of mismanagement and corruption were rife. Lincoln himself was subjected to frequent nagging and very bitter attacks.

At that time Lincoln had no tremendous hold on the people. It took the triumph of the union cause and more particularly the tragedy in Ford's theater to bring the average American mind to a realization of the fact that the man who had been president during the dark hours of the civil war was one of the great souls of history.

Lincoln went into the White House with a great problem on his hands. Ahead of him was the great task of preserving the union. He was assured of three years and eight months—the period between his inauguration and the election of November, 1864—in which to persuade the American people that he was making good. He needed all but two or three months of that time! It was Farragut's great victory in Mobile bay in August, and the capture of Atlanta by Sherman and Sheridan's ride from "Winchester, twenty miles away," in September, which persuaded the North that the Democratic watchword, "The war is a failure," was a falsehood.

No one realized his political weakness better than Lincoln. As late as August 23, 1864, the great president himself believed that his re-election was impossible. On that day he wrote a memorandum, which did not see the light until long after

"This morning as for some days past," so the memorandum ran, "it seems exceedingly probable that this administration will not be reelected. Then it will be my duty to co-operate with the president-elect as to save the nation between the election and his inauguration, as he will have secured his election on such grounds that he can not possibly save it afterward."

What do you think, Mr. Voter, would have been the effect on the United States of America if there had been a recall election in January or February, 1864, and Lincoln had been beaten?

When we elect a president, it is not only a fair but a common-sense arrangement that he should have a full four-year term in which either to make a failure or a success of his program. The same thing is true on a smaller scale of the governor of a state or the mayor of a city. It is bad enough, as some of the Pacific coast cities have already discovered, to keep municipal politics in constant turmoil by repeated recall elections. To keep national politics embroiled in the same way would be a folly of which the American people—if they ever committed it—would soon repent.

Of course in his heart Roosevelt is under no delusion as to the effect of the recall of presidents. But as he said in another part of his Winslow address "I never feel like refusing what the people want" What other prominent American has ever thought that he had the power to "refuse" anything the American people really desired?

Of course what Roosevelt is doing at the present moment is to offer anything that seems to give promise of votes. Whether the offer is practical or sincere will make no difference to him between now and election day.

It's hard for Candidate Wilson to understand why that man Bryan continues to harp upon that one-term plank in the Democratic platform.

LICENSES ISSUED TO THE MOTORCYCLISTS

A Large Number of Motorcycles in the City.

The ordiance requiring all owners of motorcycles to carry license numbers became effective, Tuesday, and the patrolmen have been instructed to arrest any person riding without a number. The mayor believes that the owners of motorcycles have been sufficiently warned and have had plenty of time to procure numbers.

Up to Wednesday, the mayor issued forty-two licenses. The price of a license to the first day of January is seventy-five cents. On or just previous to the first day of January the owners of the machines will be required to take out licenses for a year, the fee being two dollars. It is estimated that there are no less than 100 motorcycles in Marion. The owners of machines out of the city who continually operate on the streets will be required to have license numbers the same as local owners.

The mayor had many applicants for No. 1, the first and successful applicant for the smallest number being Charles Long, of Chestnut street. Earl Johnson, of west Center street, does not believe that No. 13 is unlucky and on application he received the number. No. 23, commonly known as the "skidoo" number, was secured by Ernest Robison, of Silver street.

LARGE CROWD HEARS TWO GREAT ADDRESSES

General R. B. Brown and Hon. T. L. Lewis Here.

THE COURT-ROOM PACKED BY AUDIENCE

The Political Issues of the Day Are Discussed by the Speakers in an Able Manner—Facts Presented the Voters by Two of Ohio's Distinguished Citizens.

Arousing a large audience to enthusiasm, General Robert B. Brown, Republican candidate for governor, and Tom L. Lewis, candidate for secretary of state, in addresses at the courthouse, Wednesday night, formally opened the Republican campaign in Marion county.

Both declared with emphasis that the paramount issue of the campaign is not alone the preservation of the the Republican protective tariff, but the salvation of the federal constitution as well.

At the conclusion of the addresses of General Brown and Mr. Lewis, former Congressman Grant E. Mouser was unable to resist the strong temptation "to say a word for President Taft," and eloquently assured General Brown that Marion county Republicans would do their duty on election day, casting their vote for President Taft and the illustrious Republican candidate for governor.

Each speaker in turn condemned the one man regarded by loyal Republicans as the Benedict Arnold of politics. The crowd appeared to like the flaying administered Roosevelt. It was silent when the once magic name of the former president was spoken and it was cheering at the mention of the name of Taft.

General Brown's address was forceful and clear, masterful and scholarly. But, at the same time, it was a savage, almost vitriolic, assault upon the ambitious standard-bearer of the Bull Moose part, whose leadership, the general asserted, with face red from earnestness, was bent upon pulling down and laying waste.

National Ingrate.

With all the convincing argument of the able man that he is, the candidate for governor convicted Theodore Roosevelt of being not only the nation's greatest ingrate, but being guilty also of deception. He charged that, if Roosevelt had been nominated by the Republicans in Chicago, the former president would now be "appealing for Republican support instead of attempting to destroy the party which raised him to the first place in the republic and made possible his fellowship with the monarchs and the titled leaders of continental Europe."

The speaking followed a reception from 6.30 to 7 o'clock, held by General Brown and Mr. Lewis in the lobby of the Pilgrim Inn, where hundreds called to shake hands with the state candidate.

While General Brown waited in the court-room until the crowd arrived, Mr. Lewis addressed 600 people from the west courthouse steps. He was introduced by Mr. Mouser.

"I am glad so far as I am concerned, to talk in the open," Mr. Lewis began and launched into a discussion of the issues of the campaign. He declared thtat he thought the people were congregated to hear a discussion of the issues, and said they had a right to know the principles involved in the contest. "My desire is to refrain from abusing any public speakers, candidates or anyone taking sides in this controversy," the former miner asserted. He added that there was no reason why the issues could not be discussed calmly and without villification, but added that a peculiar political condition obtained this year that appeared to warrant the condemnation expressed against a certain personage. The speaker shouted:

Bull Moose Cause.

"We as citizens, want to know why there is organized a Bull Moose-velt movement to divide, if possible both the Democratic and Republican parties? The standard bearer of the Bull Moose party went to Chicago, and because he failed to secure the nomination of the Republican party, he became the prime mover in organizing a third party. Men, what would you think of me if I failed to be reelected to the highest office in a fraternal organization and I left the lodge and went out and said my fraternal brothers stole the election from me? And more than that, if I organized a rival fraternal order because I was honestly defeated for re-election to a chair that I had once filled and which was the highest honor that the lodge could bestow?"

Roosevelt, he said, had organized the minority of the Republican party into the third party and caught as many Democrats as he possibly could, and is now trying his level best to wreck both parties.

A fraternal brother who sought to disorganize a lodge in that fashion, Mr Lewis said, would be branded as a traitor. "If I should attempt that as a fraternal member, you would say I was trying to destroy the institution because I could not run it," he declared. "And Mr. Roosevelt is going over the country and saying he is opposed to bosses, yet it is very evident that he is trying to ruin the Republican party because he could not boss the Chicago convention.

Measure of Roosevelt.

"If the big Bull Moose had been nominated at Chicago, he would now be traveling about the country and declaring the Republican party was the only party that can carry out the policies of the nation."

Mr. Lewis referred to the danger that faces the country in the election of Roosevelt, and made an earnest appeal for the preservation of the constitution under which the United States had become the world's greatest republic. He said he appealed to the intelligence of the laborer, the farmer and the business man, and took his hearers back to the Democratic poverty-stricken times of 1893. In 1892, he said, times were prosperous, and the mills and mines were in operation. "We had the most prosperous times we ever had up to that time," he said. Then he described how the American people were appealed to to change this prosperous system for a Democratic administration.

"And what happened?" Mr. Lewis asked. "I can tell you as far as the mine workers and the mill workers are concerned. I know what happened to the miners, for I was a miner twenty-two years. The miners' wages were cut thirty per cent., mines were closed and there was stagnation of business everywhere."

Called to Court-Room.

At this point, Mr. Lewis was interrupted by Mr. Mouser, who asked that he come to the court-room.

"All those who are willing to accompany me to the court-room and hear me discuss the issues further, ed the speaker, leaning forward like please hold up your hands, "declar- an evangelist at a religious camp-meeting, and with all the earnestness of a camp-meeting evangelist.

A number held up their hands, but the major part of the crowd was unwilling to leave the open for the court-room. However, the court-room was already well filled by those who had gone to get seats before the speaking begun, and by the time Mr. Lewis was introduced to the audience the court-room was filled.

Mr. Lewis partially reviewed what he had said on the courthouse steps. "Any man who has any respect for his country, who has any love for his home, should rally to the standard of the Republican party and make Roosevelt one of the most discredited citizens in the United States, something that he richly deserves. But there is nothing personal so far as I am concerned."

Only Vote Regretted.

The speaker added that he had voted for Roosevelt and said he was sorry to say that was the only Republican vote he had any regrets for casting. He said he was not going to take up any time in discussing the tariff, for he could talk all night on it, if he went into all of its details. He pointed out the danger of changing the tariff and what even the threat of changing it would do. He warned the people against any change of administration that would "fool" with the tariff.

"What happened when the Democrats were given the power to change the tariff?" Mr. Lewis asked. "What happened? Why, chaos existed from one end of the country to the other, so far as industry was concerned, and for that reason you people of Marion and Marion couonty are vitally interested. Remember when the price of the products of the farm went down and down and the wage of the worker was cut and cut and he had no employment at all? There was no markets because the great industrial army had no money to buy and was marching here and there, tramping tramping for work.

"Some farmers down in my section of the country that I know had to mortgage their farms to pay the taxes. Do you want to go back to that? It's for you to decide, and we can go back to that, notwithstanding that we are now in the midst of the most prosperous era this country has ever known.

Every Class Suffers.

"A panic affects every class, rich and poor, and I am opposed, even by inference, to reestablishing the conditions that existed in 1893. I hope and pray that the people will stop long enough to analyze the situation that the wage-earner will confront with a Democratic administration.

"I am not surprised that the chief Bull Moose is able to throw dust into the people's eyes, for he has been able to fool some of the most intelligent men of this country. But I honestly believe that, when November 5 rolls around, the people will give President Taft such a majority as to continue his great work, feeling secure in the confidence of the people.

"I never knew a time when the farmer and business men were more prosperous than now. Who has done more to enforce the Sherman anti-trust law and to prosecute the illegal combinations than the president of the United States? What did the big chief Bull Moose do?"

Mr. Lewis described the absorption of the Tennessee Iron & Coal company by the steel strust under Roosevelt's administration, and the immediate establishment of a system as a result that caused sweeping reduction in wages to the miners, and untold hardship. He declared:

How to Judge People.

"Judge people by the company they keep. I shall oppose and resent this sort of legalized absorptions, permitted by Roosevelt, with all the power and force at my command.

"Go out and investigate conditions for yourself, and I know what your verdict will then be. It will be an overwhelming majority for President Taft in vindication of his administration, for the man in the White House is the real progressive standard-bearer. The difference between the president and T. R. is that the president believes in doing things and not making any noise about it, and the other believes in making a big noise and doing nothing."

Mr. Lewis closed with an appeal to the people to study conditions thoroughly before casting their ballots "Don't vote to bring back the dead times of '93," he beseeched. "Vote for Taft and a continuance of this wonderful prosperity and still better things. Compare your condition now and the possible condition that will exist with a change of administration. Then I know your verdict will be an intelligent one. I appeal to your patriotism. I appeal to your intelligence. Do your duty on election day, not because I want you to do it, but because you want to maintain a standard of labor, a standard of business, a standard of agriculture, that is higher than anywhere in the world today. Do it to maintain our institutions—for all of our sacred institutions of liberty and justice; yea, do it even for a greater reason—for the home. And when we protect the home we protect the government. Protect the home and the government will not be in danger. I believe, from the bottom of my heart, that General Brown here will be the next governor of Ohio, and President Taft will be the next president of the United States, and I further believe my fellow wage-earners will rally to the standard that means still more prosperity and greater opportunities."

Mr. Lewis was applauded frequently throughout his address.

General Brown Heard.

General Brown, at the outset, said he was "delighted to be in this good city of Marion, to have mingled with his comrades at the fair, and to have ridden with my good friend, who should be governor of Ohio today."

The general said he was glad to have noted the evidences of prosperity on every hand in Marion, the beautiful surroundings, the beautiful streets, etc. Then he told of Ohio's greatness, both in its products of the soil and of the men who had made the old state illustrious. "We are all proud of Ohio as we are of the great republic," said the gubernatorial candidate, as he named over the Ohio men who had held the nation's highest office.

"I do not come to criticize or to call in question the motive of any man," declared General Brown. "I come with the message of optimism and good will. I come to discuss the questions that touch and overreach the vital interests of us all."

The old war hero spoke of having addressed his comrades at the fair, how he had repeated to them the sacred oath they took to defend the federal constitution when they entered the service, and how he had appealed to them always to bear that oath in mind in times of peace as in times of strife.

"In this presence tonight I want to enforce that appeal," the speaker cried, striking an atttitude that showed the fight that was still in him, and with eyes ablaze. "Upon your soul rests the sacred responsibility to preserve that blessed constitution now so bitterly and shamefully attacked by ruthless hands."

A Mad Leader.

It was the same constitution, General Brown declared that Sir William E. Gladstone, the grand old man of England, pronounced the greatest instrument of a people's liberty and civic rights. He could not believe the people would now forsake it to follow a mad leader.

The general said he could not believe that the people would sacrifice the principles of the constitution, "the Magna Charta of our liberties." "But in the name of the patriots dead and the patriots living, if a change be made, if a change must be made, let it be made at the hands of men not mad with a lust for power, but by men with the sublemnity of this bench, men who respect our rights and who appreciate that grand instrument that has stood all these years as a lighthouse to all the down-trodden people of the earth."

General Brown turned and faced the judges' bench as he spoke.

"Oh! I know what troubles the one who so boldly uttered, 'Thou shall not steal.' I know. The trouble with this author is, 'Thou shall have no other God before me."

The audience laughed. General Brown dclared the Republican platform written in Chicago was dedicated to human rights and to human progress, and predicted that Taft would be reelected on that platform. He said he had no unkind words for Mr. Wilson, the Democratic nominee, and then referred to him as "Professor Wilson, eminent as a scholar, and the first layman to have been called to the head of the great university, which he made eminently successful, but he must now stand or fall as the head of the Democratic party, that has had the habit of doing things wrong for fifty years."

The speaker said he did not need to discuss the tariff, because it had been settled everywhere except in England. He gave a brilliant word-picture of the American home, and begged his hearers to bear in mind the welfare of the occupants of that now happy home before casting their ballot, November 5.

"As God gives you the light, cast your ballot for the home, for it is here you make character that abides forever," he said.

Hon. Grant E. Mouser.

Mr. Mouser, who had acted as chairman, made a ringing speech for Taft. He wanted to know why any Republican should go back on the president. He took a rap at Roosevelt, declaring him to be as dangerous as Bryan was in 1896 with his free silver issue. "We are going to unite here in Marion county, General Brown, and elect you the next governor and President Taft the next president," Mr. Mouser declared. He also paid a tribute to Mr. Lewis, who had worked in the bowels of the earth for twenty-two years.

The meeting closed with three cheers and a tiger for President Taft and the Republican ticket Major S. N. Titus led the demonstration.

Simultaneous with General Brown's visit here a movement was started among a number of the old soldiers to band together in support of the veteran because, it was argued, he probably would be the last civil war veteran to be a candidate for governor of the Buckeye state.

General Brown made hundreds of friends here. He is plain-mannered and likeable. He is rather short in stature, and of a pleasing personality. In company with Mr. Lewis, General Brown left for Steubenville, late Wednesday night. Both speak at a fair near that city today.

ROUP IS PREVENTED BY VACCINATION

University Chickens Are Given New Treatment.

Have you been vaccinated?

If not, you are not in the running with 400 chickens at the Ohio State University, says the Ohio State Journal. Today they will strut their proudest and cackle their loudest, for yesterday they were vaccinated.

It wasn't because smallpox had broken out in the flock on the university poultry farm, but because roup was feared. Now not one of the 400 ca npossibly take the roup for at least a year, so those claiming to know say. It is expected that eggs will be more plentiful from laying hens, and that every bird will be able better to withstand the cold winter weather.

Dr. O. V. Brumley ad his class of veterinary students administered the serum through hypodermic syringes. Each fowl was caught and held by one student while another injected the serum just beneath "the point of the keel," as a poultry man says. That means near the ridge of the breastbone, between the white meat and the skin. More than a dozen students worked at this, and six fowls were given treatment at the same time.

Professor F. S. Jacoby, head of the poultry husbandry department, said the chickens took the treatment stoically. Few feathers were lost. The worst case of nervousness was noted in a tough old rooster who warned his brood in vain against such inhuman treatment. Most of the birds vaccinated were young pullets, weighing about three pounds.

There have been no cases of roup among the flock at the university. The action was taken as a measure of precaution. Injection of the serum will not harm the fowl for eating, according to Dr. Brumley.

For several years the veterinary college has been experimenting with inoculation as a preventive for different diseases. Prize fowls have been treated in this way before. A number of veterinary students last winter vaccinated themselves as a precaution against colds.

THE FARMERS' RIGHTS MUST BE RESPECTED

Comment on the Actions of Some Hunters.

Just now the farmer is having his troubles. Hunters from every nook and corner of the county are searching the country for game. Many of these are unthoughtful and negligent of the rights of the landowner. They knock down the farmers' fences and frighten his stock and infrequently wound some of the animals on the farm.

More care should be exercised by hunters, for no man cares to have his whole farm shot up, and the few squirrels, birds and rabbits that are there killed or driven away. Is it any wonder that nearly every farmer opposes the hunter?

The laws can save the game from utter destruction. If necessary the short open season can be made still shorted. It is possible to prohibit the killing of some kinds of game entirely. The guns used and the size of the bag taken can be regulated, but there remains to be considered the right of the farmer to the exclusive use if he so desires, of his own premises.

There must be less trespassing on land where hunting is forbidden. The laws for the protection of farmers' rights must be more vigorously enforced. It is a shame that fields and woods owned by men who want to keep the wild creatures living there safe from pursuit and desire to save their crops, fences and stock from injury or molestation, should be invaded by hunters who defy the owners of the property and the law, also.

In this respect there is urgent need of reform. Permission must be sought and obtained before farms and woods are entered by hunters. The owners of the land must have the respectful and decent treatment to which they are entitled by every rule of law and justice.

HEAVENS IN OCTOBER ARE FULL OF INTEREST

What May Be Seen by Students of Astronomy.

THE MOVEMENTS OF THE PLANET SATURN

Is Now Passing Two Beautiful Little Groups of Stars—The Pleiades and the Hyades Two Foremost Groups of the Great Constellation Known as Bull.

The evenings of October are always noteworthy to those who watch the heavens, for it is in this month that we always witness the re-entrance of the two beautiful little groups of stars known as the Hyades and the Pleiades into the eastern sky. But this year this part of the heavens is even more interesting than usual, for the planet, Saturn, in its slow eastward journey is now passing these groups, and for many months we will see it shining out nearly midway between them. These three most striking objects form a little region of the sky of such beauty that it attracts the attention even of those who are wholy unfamiliar with the heavens above them.

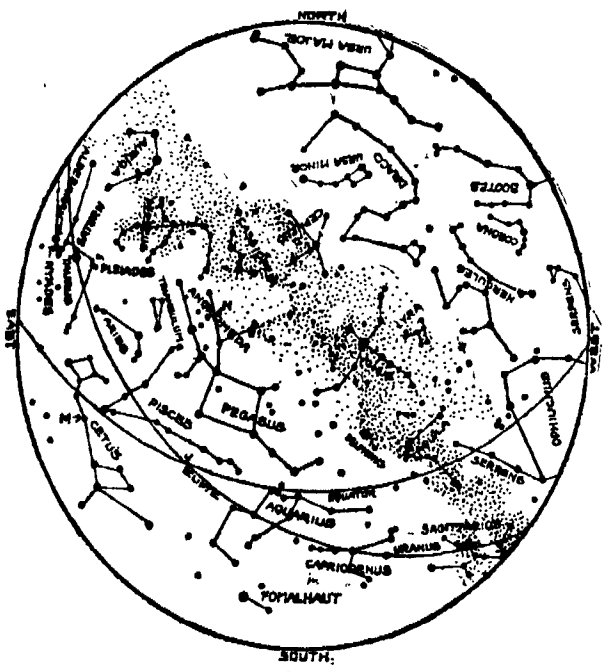

Figure 1. The constellations on October 1, at 9 p. m. If facing south hold the map upright. If facing east hold east below; if facing west hold west below. If facing north hold the map inverted.

Celebrated Group of Stars.

The Pleiades and the Hyades are the two foremost groups of the great constellation known as the Bull. Though they are well above the ground at 9 o'clock, the observer can study them to more advantage by waiting until an hour later. If he then turns a little way toward the north of the east point, his notice will at once be arrested by the delicate, filmy dipper-shaped little group of bluish stars which form the Pleidaes, while below this he will see the V-shaped Hyades, with the great reddish Aldebaran at its lower end. To the eye the Pleiades may seem to consist of but six stars, though if the night is very clear two or three more may be detected, but in a pair of opera glasses a quite dense and most interesting cluster is at once revealed.

As he looks at this most interesting star group, every member of which is a sun, he may consider that this is almost the very earliest object about which human records have come down to us. It was watched and writen of in China 4300 years ago; the earliest sacred books of Egypt tell of the time when the vernal equinox was at these stars, and that year was known as the Great Year of the Pleiades. In all the centuries which have passed since this time of the very dawn of history, the steady westward motion of the equinox has now only carried it to the point V of figure 1; it will not complete the circuit of the heavens until 26,000 years have passed away.

Numberless legends are associated with this beautiful little group, the peoples of almost all nations connecting them with the affairs of Earth for either good or evil. But of more importance is the modern discovery that the stars of the Pleiades are actually associated together as they seem to be, forming a little group in the depths of space. And delicate photographs show that throughout the group there exist vast clouds of faintly shining nebulous matter which not only surround some of the larger stars but span with faint, straight lines the inconceivably great distances from star to star. Either we are witnessing here the last stages of the formation of a cluster of great suns from an original nebula, all of which has not yet been absorbed or else these suns are ejecting radiant matter, just as matter is driven away from our sun to form its corona, but on an inconceivably vaster scale. We do not know whether what we see is a dissipation of matter or a building up of new worlds But now as at the time of the earliest dawn of history the Pleiades attract us as one of the most wonderful of all the objects in the heavens.

The reddish star, Aldebaran, is so far distant that the light with which we view it started on its journey to us 28 years ago. This sun pours out nearly 200 times as much light as our own, and it is moving away from us at a speed of 30 miles a second. In the southeast at M. Figure 1, the observer should also note the remarkable variable star Mira, which is now only of about the fourth magnitude, while due south the royal star Fomalhaut hes now reached its highest position in the sky.

The Eagle, the Dolphin and the beautiful Northern Cross shine out high in the northwest, while east of these the great square of Pegasus now forms the most conspicuous figure in the southern sky. The reader should not fail to examine the wonderful nebula of Andromeda at

N, Figure 1, concerning which and other similar nebulas the question is again being discussed whether they may not each be a great universe of suns at an unimaginable distance away.

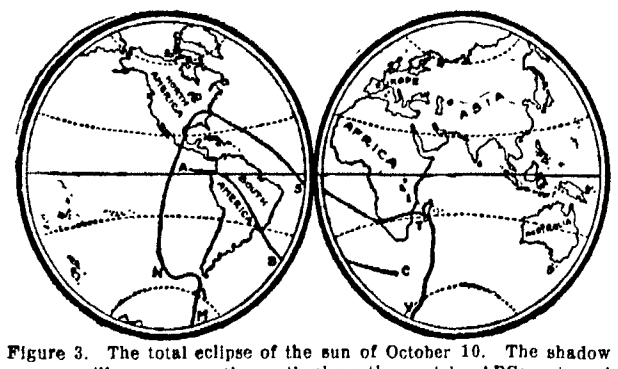

Figure 3. The total eclipse of the sun of October 10. The shadow of the moon will sweep over the earth along the patch ABC; at points within this narrow strip only the sun will be seen completely hidden. Within the area, MNOSTV, the moon will be seen to partially cover the disc of the sun. Elsewhere on the earth the eclipse will be wholly invisible.

The Planets in October.

Mercuray passes to the east of the sun on October 4, but does not attain its greatest distance until November 19. It can be seen with difficulty toward the close of the month very near the ground in the southwest for a short time after sunset.

Venus is steadily moving outward from the sun's rays, setting slightly more than one hour after sunset on October 1, which time is increased to one hour and forty-five minutes by October 31. On October 11 Venus and Mercury will be close together in the sky, the former planet being north of the latter at a distance only one-third as great as the distance across the moon. They may be seen near the ground in the southwest shining out in the sunset glow before the bright stars of the sky become visible.

Mars is too near the sun to be observed this month. It passes to the west of the sun and becomes a morning star on November 4.

Jupiter is also steadily sinking in the southwest. The observer will notice that Venus is drawing nearer to Jupiter and that by the end of the month the first planet sets only ten minutes after the second. They will not reach their point of closest approach, however, until November 7.

Saturn throughout the month will be the most conspicuous object in the evening sky. Its rings are now well widened out and for many months it will remain in excellent position for observation.

Neptune is at present in the constellation of the Twins. It rises at midnight, and is hence a morning star.

Total Eclipse of Sun.

An important total eclipse of the sun will occur on the morning of October 10, the path of the shadow of the moon as it sweeps over the turning earth being that shown in Figure 3. When the shadow has reached the eastern part of Brazil the moon will be so near the earth that it will completely hide the sun for one minute and fifty seconds. If the skies are clear, excellent photographs of the sun's corona will doubtless be obtained from stations in this part of the path. The eclipse will not be visble from the United States except in the extreme southeastern part, where it will be seen as a small partial eclipse only.

Shooting Stars of October.

The observer who witnessed the beautiful August display of shooting stars may be interested to observe a somewhat fainter shower which will occur from the 18th to the 20th of October. This is known as the Geminid shower and is composed of many bluish, very swiftly moving meteors which may best be seen by facing eastward on the evenings indicated a short while before midnight. The shooting stars will dart outward in all directions from the southwestern edge of the constellation Gemini, usually leaving a trail behind them.

A RELIC OF DEPARTED DAYS IN THIS CITY

An Invitation of About Sixty-Five Years Ago.

In a collection of old papers in the Osborne family has been found an invitation which has been in the family for over sixty-five years, the contents of which will be of interest to many of the older resident of Marion.

The invitation is to a cotillion party and was received by Mrs. J. T. Bean, the mother of Mrs. Eva Osborne, principal of the Lincoln school building, a few years prior to her marriage to Mr. Bean in 1849.

The invitation which is yellow with age, is addressed to Miss Elizabeth Holloway, of Marion, and bears a postmark from Granville, March 12. The year is not given, but as it was addressed in Mrs Bean's maiden name it is supposed to have been received by her sometime previous to her marriage. The small envelope is sealed with a red wafer, and the invitation is printed as follows:

"You are respectfully solicited to attend a Cotillio: Party, to be held at the Mansion House, Marion, on the evening of the 31st inst., commenc- at 5 o'clock P. M."

The names of the signers who managed the affair will be recognized as men prominently known in Marion and in its early history. They are as follows:

O. Bowen, N. M. Leatherberry, O. Patten, S. A. Griswold, E. P. Copeland, A. C. W. Norton, J. C. James and J. B. Dumble.

AUTOMOBILE PARTY SUFFERS ACCIDENT

Carl Bloom and Albert Postle Are Slightly Injured.

Carl Bloom and Albert Postle, of Kenton, were confined at the Marion City hospital as a result of injuries received when they jumped from the automobile in which they were returning home, Saturday evening about 6 o'clock, when the machine went into a deep ditch in front of the Blake residence on the Garden City pike. Mrs. Marguerite Lingrel, a sister of Mr. Bloom, who was riding in the front seat with Joseph F. Spitzer, the driver of the car, remained in the auto and she and the driver escaped injury.

The party was returning home after spending the day in Marion. Spitzer was driving at a moderate rate of speed and when he pulled out to pass a wagon, the machine skidded toward a deep ditch. Bloom and Postle jumped from the auto which proved unfortunate for them. The auto ran into the ditch where it was brought to a stop, the machine not being damaged.

The Hess & Market ambulance was called and removed the injured men to the hospital. Mrs. Lingrel accompanied them in the ambulance. Spitzer returned to the city and later left for his home. On examination at the hospital it was found that neither was seriously injured. Bloom's right leg was badly bruised and skinned, while Postle renewed an old injury to his spine, he being a sufferer of spinal trouble. Their condition was improved Monday, and they were able to return home in a day or two.

JAMES M'WILLIAMS PASSES AWAY MONDAY

Death Comes After an Illness of a Couple of Years.

RESIDES IN MARION COUNTY ALL HIS LIFE

Is Twice Married and Is Preceded in Death by Both Wives—Leaves Five Children — A Prosperous Farmer Well Known in the City and Throughout the County.

James McWilliams, a pioneer resident of this county, died at his home on Mt. Vernon avenue, Monday afternoon at 12:35 o'clock, of old age and complications He had been in failing health for the past couple of years but had been only seriously ill for a few months. His death has been expected some time.

Mr. McWilliams celebrated his eighty-sixth birthday a couple of weeks ago. He was born near Waldo and was a son of the late Samuel and Fannie McWilliams, who settled in Marion county near Waldo in 1823, coming to Ohio from Cumberland county, Pennsylvania. His grandfather was an officer in the revolutionary war and one of his uncles served in both the revolutionary war and the war of 1812. For years, Mr. McWilliams resided on a farm, about a mile east of Marion, and a couple of years ago moved to Marion and has resided with his daughter, Miss Anna McWilliams, at the corner of Mt. Vernon and Reed avenues. He was a prosperous farmer and well known throughout the county.

A SWEEPING ORDER IS RECEIVED THURSDAY

Board of Education Must Abandon Central Building.

THE SCHOOL BOARD FACES BAD SITUATION

The State Building Department Says Building Is Unsafe—Steps Must Be Taken To Make the Structure Safe and Other Quarters Must Be Found for Grades.

The following sweeping order with reference to the Central school building was received by Clerk Jeanette L. Hutchinson, of the board of education, Thursday afternoon, from T. P. Kearns, chief inspector of the state's department of inspection of workships, factories and public buildings:

"Owing to the fact that the brick walls of the upper part of the building have spread to such an extent that the ceiling joists are nearly pulled off the joist-bearers, and the fact that some of them have been already pulled off and are now held up only by the plaster and lath, the occupants of the building are in danger, and the use of the building must be discontinued at once.

"Before the first and second floors of the building are again occupied for school purposes, the walls must be rodded in a substantial manner, and any other work done that is necessary to make the building safe in every respect, this order to be complied with at once.

Chief Inspector Kearns referred the clerk to Sections 1031, 4648-57, Ohio genera' code, giving him authority to enforce the order.

The order came as a surprise to board members, notwithstanding the fact that superintendent Henry A. Hartman indicated in a recent public statement that he had knowledge of its coming.

Blame Superintendent.

School Board Members Robert J. Pennell and H. Edmund Hill declare that the superintendent is responsible for the order being made. Friday Mr. Pennell expressed himself as opposed to the drastic order, but said he was ready and willing at all times to do all he could for the safety of the children.

According to Chief Inspector Kearns, the order is made as a sequel to the report of an inspection made by Inspector Carl F. Wilcke, of Findlay, September 18.

Fashion's trend
Style News from an authoritative Source.

THE Directoire styles are derived from that epoch of French history, known as the Directorate—which lasted from 1795 to 1799. It is from the masculine dress of that period, however, not the feminine, that our present styles are being derived. The men (or rather the "Macaronies" or fops) of that day wore garments that were notable in their exaggeration.

The tails of their coats were exaggeratedly long; the revers very pointed, very broad, and sometimes double; collars were high and limp; cravats were much frilled and voluminous; vests were longer than the coat front and always of a contrasted material.

Some Facts You Should Know About CHARMEUSE.

MARION RECEIVES THE NEWS WITH GREAT GRIEF

Congressman Anderson Stands High in This City.

HOLDS GOOD OPINION OF MANY FRIENDS

A Tireless Worker for All His Constituents and a Warm Friend of Every Old Soldier in His District. Many Pay Tribute to Memory of Their Friend.

Marion county soldiers are grief-stricken over the tragic death of Congressman Carl C. Anderson in an automobile accident, near Fostoria, Tuesday night, the details of which are carried in the telegraph columns of the Star on page No. 3.

The young congressman's death came as a shock to the entire Thirteenth district, but it was the old soldiers who felt the blow more perhaps than anyone outside of the congressman's family and intimate associates.

Representative Anderson devoted his diligent attention to the welfare of the old soldiers. He worked night and day in their behalf, and the pensions and pension increases he obtained for Marion county veterans, and their widows, is a remarkable testimonial to his industry and loyalty to their interests.

But not only did Mr. Anderson work diligently for the old soldiers, he was just as alert for every one of his constituents. He ignored no person, and never a letter was written to him that did not receive his prompt attention. He was not much of an orator. He made no pretentions to being one, but he was a hard-working congressman, tireless in behalf of his constituents.

The First Message.

The first news of the congressman's death was received here by John A. Key, his private secretary. Mr. Key was notified by long distance telephone early Wednesday morning, and left on the first train for Fostoria. "I can't say anything," he said to friends at the station before departing, his eyes full of tears. "It is terrible news."

In connection with Mr. Anderson's death the morning papers carried a story to the effect that John R. Worst, of Sandusky, probably would be given the nomination by the district congressional committee. However, a number of Marion Democrats are favorable to the nomination going to Mr. Key, but will take no action toward booming him until after the funeral of the dead congressman. They say Mr. Key is familiar with the work in behalf of the old soldiers in the district and that he, as private secretary, has been largely instrumental in securing pensions and pension increases for the old soldiers. He would carry the district's big soldier vote, they say.

The Marion county members of the congressional committee are Frank Campbell, a farmer, and Mr. Key.

All over the city expressions of profound sorrow were heard over the congressman's death.

Judge Scofield declared he was shocked. "He was a congressman worth while, and a congressman who was a congressman," he added.

County Auditor Jay Spaulding said his tragic death was most deplorable. "A man twice elected mayor of Fostoria, and twice elected to congress and yet only thirty-five years old, a bright future is ended. His future prospects were brilliant."

Major S. N. Titus said: "I had expected to vote for him." It was not necessary for him to say more. Major Titus is a Republican.

Major Titus' intention was the intention practically of every old soldier in the county.

Probate Judge W. S. Spencer said: "I hardly know what to say. Always I found Congressman Anderson ready, willing and anxious to do anything for anybody in the district, for the old soldier or anybody else. I was frequently called on to request him to aid in securing pension increases, and he gave prompt attention to everything put before him. He left nothing undone to do a favor for any one."

Great Leader.

"I exceedingly regret to hear the untimely death of Congressman Anderson," said County Treasurer R. S. Dombaugh. "The district has certainly lost a great leader whose every thought was for the interest of mankind."

J. Wilbur Jacoby said: "It's deplorable. He was a dear friend to everybody and he will be sadly missed."

"He died too young," said County Surveyor George E. Dwyer.

"The district has certainly lost a good representative," said County Commissioner J. K. Leeper.

"I was simply dumbfounded by the news," said Prosecuting Attorney Charles L. Justice. "Outside of his family and intimate associates he will be missed most by the old soldier. By them he was loved."

Similar expressions were made by citizens generallly.

Ex-Congressman Grant E. Mouser was terribly shocked by the announcement of the death of the man who had been his political opponent, but at the same time his friend. Mr. Mouser said that Congressman Anderson probably stood as high in the good opinion of his constituents as any public servant in the country. He said he had rendered service that made him worthy of every confidence.

A telephone message from John A. Key, Wednesday, stated that the funeral services of Congressman Anderson will be held at his late home, Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock. The remains will be buried at Fremont. A great many Marion friends of the deceased will attend the services.

The tri-county bar committee investigating the charges made by Attorney Benjamin Meck, of Bucyrus, against Judge Daniel Babst, of Bucyrus, adjourned its hearing at Bucyrus, Monday afternoon, until Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

After the hearing on the Findlay case is heard, Saturday, the jury-packing charges will be taken up.

William L. David, former prosecuting attorney of Hancock county, was the star witness of Monday's hearing. The famous prosecutor of the Standard Oil declared that Judge Babst was, in his opinion, a model upon the bench.

Judge Babst also testified. He gave a clear and concise account of trial at Findlay, practically as given in a recent interview with a reporter for the Star.

VISION IN THE STORM.

By William T. Ellis.

The International Sunday-School Lesson for October 6 Is, "Jesus Walking on the Sea" Mark 6:45-56.

Now that it has become the vogue for politicians to use the phraseology and incident of the Bibe, we turn with new zest to one of the great stories, full of interest, suggestiveness and comfort, from the book that has contributed most to human thinking. Our day seems to be a troubled time for many persons, but there is a vision rising in the tempest; and this tale of how the Deliverer appeared amid the troubled waters for the help of some baffled toilers has greater pertinency for our own time than may at first appear

The Leader Who Keeps His Head.

Upon a slope in the northeastern side of the little sheet of water called the Sea of Galilee—a lake only twelve miles long by seven wide, which is yet better known to civilization than any of the seven seas— Jesus had performed one of his greatest miracles, the feeding of the 5,000. Carried away by the vision of easy prosperity and of someone who would provide them bread without work, the well-filled rabble were eager to make Him king. The popular clamor was tremendous. The ovation was so real and enthusiastic that the object of it all might easily have thought that the whole world had been stirred in His behalf. Of course the outcry was merely that of a few selfish counsellors who sought their own ends more then His honor.

To keep his judgment steady, to preserve His bearings and to make sure of His perspective, the Hero of all this acclaim went off apart from people that He might think things through. He sent off His immediate followers and the multitude whom He had fed. This was no time for human counsel; one of the great hours had come to Jesus when the soul must be alone with the Father. So we find Him apart in the mountain praying. The spectacle is one to be contemplated with reverent awe. The soul rises to its sublimest heights in its hours of solitude. The compassionate Christ in the midst of the multitude is the familiar figure that is most in our minds, but we do not understand this aright unless we remember also the vision of the Christ alone in His hours of meditation, communion and prayer.

The Followers in Trouble.

One magnetic man prominent in the public life of the United States a generation ago was thwarted in his highest ambitions and went to an embittered grave because the people had discovered that he was essentially selfish and thought only of his own interest. Had he put the welfare of the people first his name would probably have been added to the roll of presidents. The true leader must think of the people: that is his qualification for leadership. We see in the case of Jesus that no soul struggle was so great that he could not watch over the affairs of His handful of friends who at the moment that He was on the mountain in lofty devotion were struggling with the waves of a perverse sea

There are no concerns of heaven so high as to divert God's interest from individual human souls. That is the heart of the Christian gospel; that is the message borne to us from this record of the Christ who hastened from the mountain top of prayer to the turbulent waters where His friends labored in fear and distress.

Although it was three hours past midnight, this boatload of fishermen had only progressed between three and four miles, and that not in the direction in which they wanted to go They were bound for Bethsaida and Capernaum, but contrary winds kept them out toward the center of the lake. Their helplessness in these adverse waters was a real difficulty despite their seamanship, as those who best know the water most clearly understand The weary disciples needed help.

A Ghost? or a Friend?

Sometimes it seems as if we grown-ups have not got very far beyond the the state of mind of the children who see ghosts in the glinting of the moonlight on their bedroom walls. Everything new scares us. Multitudes of people are affrighted at the new ideas of brotherhood which are arising on the political horizon. Even that which brings help alarms us. So these fishermen were scared at the approaching figure which they glimpsed through the tempest, which brought them succor over the water. They thought it a ghost Human-like, they placed the gloomiest construction upon the divine providence.

That dreaded ghost was their best Friend As old as this narrative itself, is the lesson that the providences which upon their approach fill us with terror are the sendings of a gracious Father

"Ye fearful saints fresh courage take.
The clouds ye so much dread
Are big with mercy and may break
In blessings on your head"

The Word of Cheer.

Above the roar of the wind and the pounding of the waves arose the hearty hail in the familiar tones of their best friend. "Be of good cheer: it is I; be not afraid." That assurance allayed the alarm of the men who were seeing ghosts and brought them comfort and calm, for it was the Lord of nature who had come to their rescue. The storm died away hopeless of attempting to baffle this sovereign.

The first word of God unto man is one of cheer and comfort and not of terror. His messages are for strength and gladness. Somehow mankind has got a perverse and evil idea of Jehovah; we look upon Him in terror. Yet He comes to us, not to chastise but to comfort. Let us not do Him this wrong of believing only evil of God. Even in our own tempestuous time the providences which are being wrought out by Him who sitteth in the heavens are beneficent and meant only for the good of man. Every story and picture of the Saviour walking on the water to the help of the distressed should be eloquent with the message that God is good.

Learning the Old Lesson.

Venturesome, impulsive Peter set out at the sound of that voice to walk across the waves. So long as he fixed his eyes upon the approaching Master all went well But when he begun to think of Peter and of Peter's steps, his faith faltered and he would have sunk but for the helping hand of his Lord.

The entire incident set the disciples to wondering and to worship, saying, "Of a truth thou art the son of God." It had only been a few hours since that lesson had been taught them in the breaking of the loaves They had failed to learn it vitally. Now in the presence of this new miracle they thought they had it. Alas that this greatest of lessons does not stay learned! So many times we are sure after some new experience of God's goodness that we can never again distrust Him. Yet like the disiples of old, we are ever learning anew the truth of the sovereignty and love of God The grave found these same men still ignorant of the significance of the Son and His character

Probably it is inevitable that to the end of the chapter our grasp of this greatest of truths must be indifferent Each seizes it with varying degree of firmness. The multitude who in the morning light recognized Jesus on the shore and came hastening to Him with their sick and distressed had some hold of the truth. The disciples saw more than they. We have fuller knowledge than the disciples. All of us are but learners in the great school where is taught the lesson that Johovah is sovereign over all, and that the best expression of His character is His helpful, brotherly, loving Son.

MARION COUNTY PIKE BOND SALES DELAYED

Valuations of Railway Property Are Not Fixed.

Because it is necessary to know the valuations of the railroads, nearly $100,000 worth of Marion county pike bonds are now being held up as a result of the state tax commission's failure to certify to County Auditor Jay Spaulding the railway valuations for this county.

Formerly the railroad property valuations were fixed by the county auditors, but under the new appraisement law the valuations are now fixed by the state tax commission.

Bond buyers will not bid on a pike bond issue without the valuation of land through which the proposed road runs. Where the proposed pike is to cross a railroad the bond buyers demand the valuation of the railroads in the pike's territory, and the bonds for a number of pikes in this county can not now be sold until the tax commission fixes the valuations of all the railroads in the county.

Up to date, Auditor Spaulding has received the valuations of the personal property of the following roads.

Nypano, $1,160,270. Chicago & Erie, $943,390; Columbus, Delaware & Marion, $453,830 and the Columbus, Marion & Bucyrus, $73,380.

In the suit of Samuel H DeLong, receiver of the J. P. Barnthouse Grain & Seed company, against Jacob P Barnthouse, pending in the circuit court, the plaintiff, through Attorney J Wilbur Jacoby, Wednesday, filied an amended petition.

Among the new allegations are that the defendant purchased a quantity of lumber, valued at $5,610.79, when he was the manager and in control of the company, and never gave to the company anything of value; that the defendant falsely and fraudulently transferred to the company ten shares of stock, which he represented to be worth $1,000 when he knew the stock to be worthless; that he appropriated for his own use sundry moneys and accounts amounting to $1,913, and that he is now indebted to the corporation in the sum of $1,613.50.

OLD MINSTREL TEAM PLANS FOR A THEATER

Seeks To Convert Old Church to Purpose.

FIVE-YEAR LEASE PROBABLY BE MADE

Lease Is Secured by George E. Iler and Ned Burke—Will Go into Effect If Action of State Building Inspector Is Favorable as to the Changes.

The old Free Baptist church on east Center street may be converted into a vaudeville theater.

George E. Iler, of this city, and Ned Burke, of Olney, Illinois, formerly of Marion, both of whom have won considerable renown in the show business, have secured a five-year lease of the place, the lease not being effective, however, until proposed changes in the building are approved by the state architect.

Wednesday, Mr. Iler stated that the old church would be converted into a theater providing the state inspector allowed certain changes to be made. He said he would see Chief Inspector T. P. Kearns, as soon as possible

Two weeks ago Inspector Carl F Wilcke, of Findlay, inspected the old building and suggested a number of changes that would have to be made in order to comply with the present public building law. A number of exits will have to be provided and fire escapes erected.

The building is owned by the Huber estate.

IS 108 YEARS OLD AND WEIGHS FIFTY POUNDS

Miss Sarah Bates Reaches an Extreme Age.

Miss Sarah Bates, probably the oldest person in Champaign county celebrated her 108th birthday on the last day of September, says the Bellefontaine Index-Republican She was born in Johnson township in 1804, and has witnessed most of the history of the county since Ohio was made a state. The house in which her parents lived, and where she passed her first days, is not standing but was located on what is now the farm of William Buroker.

In spite of her advanced years Miss Bates is still able to move around a little with the aid of a cane and enjoys fair health. She is very frail and light, probably weighing not much over fifty pounds. Last June some of her friends put her in a baby buggy, and took her out along a creek, where they were fishing She seemed to enjoy the sport a great deal.

ONE OF NATURE'S CHOICEST GEMS

dense slabs of red sandstone, which tower to a height of more than 300 feet, twice that of Niagara Falls, and look down on the beholder with memories of countless ages of geological transformation. Between them stands a smaller, a sentinel, as it were, to guard the passageway. Beyond appears the majestic, snow-clad summit of Pike's peak.

Passing through the gigantic rock portals, one enters a region where titanic forces have been at play while the earth was in its making. Strange, weird figures are intermingled with magnificent and stately monuments to the ages. Here are the slender "Cathedral Spires," "The Three Graces," and in other places "The Shipwreck," the Siamese Twins," many representations of man and beasts and hundreds of rocks for which the imagination readily finds a name.

Adjoining the Garden of the Gods, but not a part of the tract given by the Perkins family, is Mushroom Park, containing many interesting formations, chief of which is the "Balanced Rock" weighing 500 tons and supported on a base four by five feet in size.

Colorado Springs possesses what is probably the most unique park system in the world, the Garden of the Gods being one of its chief features. The system covers a total area of 3,000 acres, which is considerably in excess of that owned by many cities with ten or twenty times the 30,000 population of Colorado Springs. This system includes North Chelenne Cañon, with its high drive throguh Bear Creek canon; several mountain trails; Palmer park, northeast of the city; Monument Valley park in the heart of the city; the Pasec and Palmer boulevards, with several smaller spaces and miles of roads and trails leading to the places of great scenic beauty.

The substantial progress which Colorado Springs has made in this direction is due in a large measure to the foresight and generosity of its founder, the late General William J. Palmer, who gave largely of his time, energy and money in securing and beautifying the park system which, a few years before his death he presented to the community.

In the early days of western railroading, Mr. Perkins was an associate of General Palmer, who was the builder of the Denver & Rio Grande railway, the Mexican Central railway and other railroads, and was also the founder of the city of Colorado Springs. It was upon General Palmer's suggestion that Mr. Perkins secured the Garden of the Gods.

Charles Mullery, lieutenant of police of the Erie, received a letter Tuesday containing thirty cents which was sent him by Robert Miller, a High school youth of prominence who lives in Akron. Last Sunday, Detective Mullery and Detective Harry Luft found the lad in the Erie yards and inquired about his presence there. The boy stated that he had run away from his home in Akron to see some of the world, but could assign no special cause for leaving.

The detectives talked with the boy for some time, and after giving him a little advice, persuaded him to return home. The boy had but $1.80, while the fare to Akron is two dollars. Detective Mullery furnished the boy the twenty cents which he needed to meet the price of a ticket, and also bought him a lunch. The detective, to test the honesty of lad told him to return the money when it was handy. Tuesday, the detective received a letter from the boy in which he enclosed the thirty cents which he had received from the detective, and at the same time thanked him for the kindness that had been shown. The boy stated that he was writing the letter in school and was very glad he took the advice of the detectives.

This however, she endured with much patience, never murmuring, nor complaining, but with implicit trust and confidence in her Lord, submitted herself unto Him who will ever take care of His own. She was a loving mother, a kind neighbor, and will be missed in the home, in the church, and in the community. CHICAGO.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—There was an absence of buying power in the wheat market this morning because of the more peaceful outlook abroad, coupled with the fact that prices at Liverpool were lower following the increased movement in the spring wheat country. There were advances at the outset, but these failed to hold, and during the first hour there were losses of ½@⅝c. The market may be called a professional one with the outsider an onlooker.

In corn, there were advances of ½c. for the December, while the May was fractionally lower. The nearby month was in demand from shorts and the offerings were rather light. The more deferred months were under some selling pressure.

Oats were without any change to speak of.

Hog products were again higher with hogs.

Opening: Wheat—May, 95⅜; December, 90⅝@¾ to 90½.

Corn—May, 52⅛; December, 52⅝ to 52½@⅝.

Lard—October, 11.32; January, 10.80.

Ribs—October, 10.70; January, 10.05.

While there were reported exports sales of wheat amounting to 700,000 bushels, of which 200,000 bushels were at Omaha and 500,000 bushels at Kansas City, the market reacted only ¼c from the bottom levels and closed for the day with net losses of ⅝@½c. There is a cut rate of freight out of Kansas City via the gulf and cut rates from Omaha to New Orleans.

Corn closed unchanged to ⅛@¾c. higher.

Oats were up ⅛@¼. Other cash sales besides those reported above were 75,000 bushels wheat at Chicago, 215,000 bushels corn and 245,000 bushels oats.

Provisions sold off shraply from the highest points reached on heavy profit taking by longs and closings were lower for pork and lard was unsettled as also was ribs.

ANOTHER ANGLE IN THE C., M. & B. LITIGATION

An Article in Cincinnati Paper Is Discredited.

ERRONEOUS IN MOST OF ITS PARTICULARS

Statement Credited to George Whysall Reviews the Financial Troubles of the C., M. & B. and Explains the Attitude of Receivers in Meeting Company Obligations.

That the Columbus, Marion & Bucyrus Railroad company's line between Marion and Bucyrus was never completed under the terms of a contract given by its former president, John C. Webb, and that the receivers notified Webb there would be a counter-claim by them of $65,000 against his claim of $87,375 for the payment of interest coupons on the company's first mortgage bonds, is the text of an explanatory statement published in Wednesday's Bucyrus Telegraph as coming from Receiver George Whysall. Mr. Whysall's purported statement is as follows:

The article in the Cincinnati Enquirer of yesterday covering a dispatch from Marion relative to a conter-claim having been made by Whysall and Guthrey, receivers of the C., M. & B. railroad, against John G. Webb, is erroneous in almost every particular.

Some months ago, Webb notified the receivers that he had personally paid interest coupons on the company's first mortgage bonds to the extent of $87,375, and that he proposed later to file his claim for same with the receivers. The receivers thereupon notified Webb that there would be a counter-claim for money expended in the purchase of equipment, ballast, and labor, amounting to approximately $65,000.

During 1905, Mr. Webb entered into a contract with the C. M. & B company whereby he agreed to construct and equip an electric railroad between Marion and Bucyrus, Ohio. The property came into the hands of the receivers in the fall of 1909 in an incomplete condition. Thereupon the receivers made a demand on Mr. Webb and his committee to complete the road in accordance with the terms of his contract Nothing being done along this line by Mr. Webb or his committee, and the receivers being without cars, the receivers at the instance of a majority of the bond holders, made application to the Marion common pleas court for authority to issue receiver's certificates to the amount of $65,000. This being the amount required as shown by the engineer's estimate, to complete Mr. Webb's contract.

Of the $65,000 receiver's certificates authorized only $20,000 were sold The balance of the money required was taken from the income after paying the expense of operation, maintenance and taxes.

The receivers have retired $8,000 of the receiver's certificates out of the income and will continue to pay off certificates as the funds accumulate while the property is in their charge

HARLEY J. KRATT IS VICTIM OF ACCIDENT

Probably Fatally Hurt in Accident at Cardington.

Harley J. Kratt was badly and probably fatally hurt about 11 o'clock Wednesday, when he fell off a wagonload of logs and the hind wheel of the heavily-loaded wagon ran over his chest, says the Cardington Independent. The lower long rib on the right side was badly crushed and other ribs broken. He probably has internal injuries also.

The accident occurred near the home of Robert DeMuth, just west of Cardington, and Mrs. DeMuth saw him fall, but was not near enough to see how the accident happened. He was lying on his face when found and it is thought the wagon wheel ran over his left chest and then rolled him over and ran over his back also. Drs. Neal and Sherman were called and took him to his home, three miles south of Cardington, in the C. F. Heimlich automobile. The latter had taken Mrs. Kratt, the young man's mother, and his daughter out from the Peoples store, where they were trading at the time of the accident.
